

Backflow Assembly Tester List

The following companies, or individuals, have requested to be placed on the Rainier View Water Co. Backflow Assembly Tester List. Rainier View Water Company is not recommending any of these companies. The customer is responsible for choosing a company to test their backflow assembly and may use any company with current year BAT certification and current (within the last year) instrument calibration reports. The customer should ask to see both these certifications before allowing testing. The customer should shop around for pricing and have an agreement on services to be performed. Customers should be aware that tests done by non-qualified testers, incomplete tests, tests with errors, or negligent testing will not be accepted and will have to be redone at customer expense. Customers are advised that installation and repair of Backflow Prevention Assemblies require additional certifications. The ability of the BAT to effect on site repairs is time saving and desirable.
